

A life slipping down the drain ...

The more Susanna attempts to maintain a semblance of normality, the more she seems to be spiralling down towards the gutter. She loses her job and her home, her partner leaves her, and eventually she becomes completely detached from the world at large – but for the internet, that is. The world-wide-web becomes a life-support system for Susanna: her last connection to society, her final hope of a morsel of love or happiness. But no one is ever quite who they pretend to be - and even more so online.

Susanna's tale, told over the course of a single night in a harrowing monologue, is bleakly inescapable. Will the dawning of the new day bring some light?
