

Mauled by apes, ridiculed by his colleagues, obsessed with a vision: The experiences and discoveries of young Darwin on his travels will rock the world to its very foundations. He battles his way through the jungle, cataloguing every beetle he comes across and almost meeting his death on more than one occasion. Furthermore, time and again he is riven by the conflict between his »unholy« scientific insights and his love for his wife. With subtle humour and an irresistible blend of historical facts and gripping narrative, Jürgen Brater recounts the life-story of this controversial philosopher, naturalist and evolutionary theorist.

→ Visionary genius and one-of-a-kind: a riveting novel about the man who discovered evolution

© privat

Jürgen Brater, born in 1948 in Norden/East Frisia, doctor, dentist and author, has been teaching biology since 2003. He has written numerous books, amongst others the »Lexicon for Patients« and »We Are All Neanderthals«. Jürgen Brater lives with his family in Aalen, Baden Wurtemberg. This is his debut novel.

Jürgen Brater

THE WONDROUS JOURNEY OF THE BEETLE COLLECTOR

Or how Darwin discovered the end of creation
Novel

Approx. 320 pages, 13,8 x 22,0 cm

Hard cover with dust jacket

ISBN 978-3-7844-3152-9

Selected press comments on Jürgen Brater:

»Top-notch writing.«

www.literatur.de on »More Power«

»Compelling and entertaining.«

Deutschlandradio on »How My Dog Discovered Biology.«

»Highly amusing and expertly written.«

Bonner General-Anzeiger on »Lexicon of Mysterious Bodily Functions«