

Brigitte Hueber's book investigates

the possibilities and boundaries of astrology. No respectable astrologer would seriously claim that the planets can influence our disposition, mindset, moods, or actions. But a person's emotional state can be predicted accurately and unambiguously, and the concurrence of emotions with the planetary constellations connected to those mood patterns can be irrefutably proved.

→A holistic world view underpins the notion that everything is interconnected. Substantiated by statistical and scientific evidence, the author demonstrates conclusively that there is a clear distinction between astrological predictions that are physically possible, and prognoses that are merely based on intuition or experience.

Brigitte Hueber is a psychologist and physiotherapist. She is also a qualified astrologer and has worked in that field since 1976, bringing the experience she has won from both disciplines to her coaching. She studied at Vienna University, gaining her doctorate with a thesis entitled ›An Empirical Examination Into How the Content of Astrological Symbols Corresponds to Empirical Experience.‹
