

Slowly but surely, ever since the turn of the 21st century, a major shift in social paradigms has been taking place which heralds the end of the patriarchy. According to the Chinese moon-calendar, which is over 4000 years old, the age of womankind will begin in 2008. Cosmic evolution calls for a change of course, to rise to the challenges our planet faces, particularly as regards ecology and ethics. According to the Eastern school of thought both sexes have yin and yang aspects that manifest themselves in different forms. While the yang or male influences are waning, the yin qualities will become increasingly dominant. Female virtues and leadership qualities are what the new era requires.

→ According to the Chinese moon-calendar the golden age of women begins in 2008.
