

familiar foreign places – fascinating encounters

»Horizons is an appropriate title for the new series from Herbig; the authors describe countries and cities that lie on the periphery of German consciousness, yet are nevertheless within view: they are travelogues covering political and social phenomena «

It is a land of unlimited opportunity. Since it opened itself up to the outside world, China has experienced the greatest economic growth worldwide. A new China is developing in Beijing, Shanghai and Hong Kong. But what is happening in the rural regions? The deep divide between the newly wealthy class and poorly-paid workers, between millionaires and miners, young and old keeps widening, not only on a material level but also as regards ideology. Janis Vougioukas depicts a world power in transition. In a series of fascinating reports he portrays people from all walks of life who are having to balance their lives poised between modernisation and tradition.

→ Caught between poverty and wealth, tradition and modernity, communism and capitalism: the portrait of a country that is changing at a breathtaking pace.

Janis Vougioukas, born in 1976, is a graduate of the German School of Journalism in Munich. He has been living in Shanghai as a freelance correspondent since June 2002.
